

Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm Hamlet Tamazian— a web developer and an Honors graduate of Pepperdine University with a background in business and conflict management. As an individual with a wide spectrum of general interests, my educational experiences are only partially encompassed by my time in college. Yet, I have demonstrated academic excellence and professionalism throughout my life. I have put great effort to learn from all types of events and resources and continue to do so as I work with code.

Regarding this position, I'd like to note I have the following skills and experience:

- I have worked on websites and web apps— both alone and in a group.
- I have an expert understanding of HTML/CSS/JS and have used supplemental technologies as needed; you can find some projects mentioned on my resume and available on GitHub.
- Those projects also use tools like Bootstrap or Material Design to help shape the page, and work with APIs, AJAX, and JSON to transfer/fetch various types of data.
- I am familiar with and have used various JS frameworks and libraries —including Node, Total, Express, Angular, React, jQuery, and Minified.
- I'm also familiar with Python; my web app Flink (on GitHub) demonstrates this.
- Most of these projects use SQL databases, but I also have experience with Mongo.
- I both enjoy and am a great online researcher, debugger, and solution-finder.
- I love making pixel perfect image to html conversions and web pages.

Of course, I have a strong desire to learn much more and am currently working to find a place that nurtures learning and growth, a place where I can further develop my programming abilities and other professional skills.

I'd like to add that I have a diverse history of professional experiences and have worked with teams in many positions. Many of these positions required multi-tasking and helping out on multiple fronts. Both in the technical world of programming and that of daily life and work, I enjoy the process of finding solutions and believe there to be a correct answer when the correct question is asked. Thus, not only would I be looking forward to working on code, but also would be greatly interested in ideation, strategy, and business related questions.

I am thrilled to begin using all the skills I have accumulated to be a valuable member of my team, company, and community. To learn more about me, please find me on LinkedIn, email me at hamlettamaz@gmail.com, or call me at (818) 268-0008. I would love to discuss the opportunity with you further as well as to elaborate on any an all points mentioned above.

Best regards,
Hamlet Tamazian